ENT304: LEADERSHIP AND CORPORATE GOVERNANCE

The Meaning of Leadership

Leadership is a development of a clear and complete system of expectations in order to identify evokes and uses the strengths of all resources in the organization the most important of which is people,
Leadership is a function of knowing yourself, having a vision that is well communicated, building trust among colleagues, and taking effective action to realize your own leadership potential
Leadership is a process of giving purpose (meaningful direction) to collective effort, and causing willing effort to be expended to achieve purpose
—Leadership is a process of influence between a leader and those who are followers‖
Leadership is a process whereby an individual influences a group of individuals to achieve a common goal‖

The eleven principles of leadership

 Know yourself and seek self-improvement - In order to know yourself, you have to understand your be, know, and do, attributes. Seeking self-improvement means continually strengthening your attributes.
 Be technically proficient - As a leader, you must know your job and have a solid familiarity with your employees' tasks.
 Seek responsibility and take responsibility for your actions - Search for ways to guide your organization to new heights. And when things go wrong, they always do sooner or later -- do not blame others. Analyze the situation, take corrective action, and move on to the next challenge.
 Make sound and timely decisions - Use good problem solving, decision making, and planning tools.
 Set the example - Be a good role model for your employees. They must not only hear what they are expected to do, but also see. We must become the change we want to see - Mahatma Gandhi.
 Know your people and look out for their well-being - know human nature and the importance of sincerely caring for your workers.
 Keep your workers informed - know how to communicate with not only them, but also seniors and other key people.
 Develop a sense of responsibility in your workers - help to develop good character traits that will help them carry out their professional responsibilities.
 Ensure that tasks are understood, supervised, and accomplished – communication is the key to this responsibility.
 Train as a team - Although many so called leaders call their organization, department, section, etc. a team; they are not really teams...they are just a group of people doing their jobs.

The Type of Leaders According to Mullins L.J (1985)

 Charismatic leader: This is a leader who gains influence mainly from strength of personality. The difficulty with charismatic leadership is that few people possessed the exceptional qualities required to transform all around them into willing followers. Another issue is that personal qualities or traits of leadership cannot be acquired by training; they can only be modified by it.
 Traditional leader: This is a leader whose position is assured by birth e.g. kings, queens and tribal chieftains. This is another category to which few people can aspire. Except in the small family business, there are few opportunities for traditional leadership at work.
 Situational leader: This is a leader whose influence can only be effective by being in the right place at the right time. The kind of leadership is temporary in nature to be of much value in a business. What is looked for is someone who is capable of assuming a leadership role in a variety of situations over a period of time.
 Appointed leader: This is a leader whose influence arises directly out of his position e.g. most managers and supervisors. This is the bureaucratic type of leadership where legitimate power springs from the nature and scope of the position within the hierarchy. The problem here is that, although the powers of the position may be defined, the jobholder may not be able to implement them because of weak personality, lack of adequate training or other factors.

 Functional leader: This is a leader who secures their leadership positions by what they are. In other words, functional leaders adapt their behaviour to meet the competing needs of the situation.
 Principle-Centered leader: This is a leader, whose approach to leadership is influenced by moral and ethical principles, involving consideration of equity, justice, integrity, honesty, fairness and trust the qualities of leaders

 Honesty: The number one quality identified by this researchers is honesty. The respondents explain that a good leader must be honest to the oath of office that saw him to power and also to his numbers of followers.
 Forward Oriented: A good leader must be forward oriented. He must always see the goal to be achieved and the challenges ahead. He must have the —Can Do‖ behavior within him. This quality is very close in comparison with the Conceptual skill of leadership
 Competence: A good leader must be competent technically, human relation wisely. He must not be a specialist in a field but a generalist. He must be able to lead others to the very rightful part.
 Inspiring: A good leader must be able to inspire his followers to attain goal and objectives. He must be able to stimulate others to do things and make things happen.
 Intelligent: A good and effective leader must be intelligent. He must be sensible and rational. He must be a first class decision maker; he must be able to correct anomalies within his team.
 Fair Minded: He must be able to keep a par between rigidity and flexibility. That is, he must not be too hard in his policies and decision and not be too easily discourage to change his painstakingly predetermined made decisions.
 Broad -Minded: A leader must be vast in thought and deed. He must be wide and expose to both challenges and opportunities ahead.
 Self -control: Another very important quality of a good leader is self control or selfdiscipline. He must train himself to have a comfortable and proper behaviour which will carry others along and sustain the module operandi of the organization.

the Roadmap to Leadership

The road to great leadership that is common to successful leaders ;
(1) Challenge the process - first, find a process that you believe needs to be improved the most.
(2) Inspire a shared vision - Next, share your vision in words that can be understood by your followers.
(3) Enable others to act - Give them the tools and methods to solve the problem.
(4) Model the way - When the process gets tough, get your hands dirty. A boss tells others what to do; a leader shows that it can be done.
(5) Encourage the hearts - Share the glory with your followers' hearts, while keeping the pains within your own.

The three leadership aspects according to Kouzes J.M

(1) Challenge the process – A leader looks for easier, more efficient ways to accomplish goals, rather than settling for the age-old way of doing something. Leaders are innovative and experimental to find new ways of doing things (Kouzes, 4).
(2) Inspiring – Leaders effectively communicate organizational goals to employees so people know what is expected of them. They give people a good reason to do their jobs by expressing how important their work is and how it helps the organization as a whole.
(3) Modeling – An effective leader teaches by example. Leaders work with the highest standards and expect others to work to those standards as well.

The five sources of power

(1) Legitimate power: This is based on one's hierarchical position the corporation president has greater legitimate power than the vice-president of manufacturing to speak on issues of corporate policy; by the same token, the vice-president of manufacturing has more legitimate power than the first line supervisor to decide on issues of capital expenditures, work floe, inventory levels etc.
(2) Reward power: This stems from the control of rewards valued by subordinates. Subordinates who act as their supervisors tell them to do so in past because they believe that their behavior will be rewarded.

(3) Coercive power: This is based on fear. If subordinates alter their behavior because they believe that a failure in company with orders from a superior will lead to punishment, they are responding to coercion.
(4) Reference power: This is based on the followers' identification with the leader. This identification may be based on personal admiration and usually includes a desire by the followers to be like the leader.
(5) Expert power: This stems from the perceived and demonstrated competencies of leaders to implement, analyze, evaluate and control the tasks assigned to their group.

The several theories of leadership

The Trait Theory

The first systematic effort by researchers to understand leadership was the attempt to identify the personal characteristics of leaders. It has been argued that there is a predisposition to consider leaders as naturally braver, more aggressive, more decisive and more articulate than other people, so that they stand out in terms of physical characteristics, personality and intelligence. One popular myth is that natural leaders are tall and stand above the crowd like Charles De Gaulle or Abraham Lincoln

The Functional or Group Approach

This approach neither focuses attention not on the personality of the leader nor on the man in the job per se but on the functions of leadership, is always present in any group engaged in a task. The functional approach views leadership in terms of how the leader's behaviour affects and is affected by the group of followers. As such, it concentrates on the nature of the group of followers or subordinates. It thus focuses on the content of leadership.
The functional approach believes that the skills of leadership can be learnt, developed and Perfected

Action –Centered Leadership

The general theory on the functional approach is associated with the work of John Adair (1984), and his ideas on action-centered leadership. According to him the effectiveness of the leader is dependent upon meeting tree areas of need within the work group- the need to achieve the common task, the need for team maintenance and the individual needs of group members. He symbolizes these needs by three overlapping circles.

The Behavioural Approach to leadership

When it becomes evident that effective leaders did not apparently have any distinguishing traits or qualities, researchers tried to understand how successful and unsuccessful managers behave differently. Instead to find out what effective leaders were, researchers finds out what effective leaders did. The importance of arriving at this conclusion is that it meant to correct actions and behaviour could be learned and training could be provided for leadership.

Likert's leadership Theory

Likert's System of Management (1967): Rensis Likert, Director of the institute for social Research at the University of Michigan developed a universal theory of leadership. Likert's theory consists of a Continuum of styles ranging from autocratic to participative

The Situational Theory of Leadership

Blanchard (1982) developed the view that leadership approaches depended very much on the ‗maturity' of their subordinates. He defined ‗maturity' as a desire for achievement and willingness to accept responsibility. He developed the theory that the relationship between leaders and followers moves through phases as subordinates ‗mature' , and that managers need to very their leadership style with each phase

Fieldler (1971) Situational Theory of Leadership

Research carried out by Fiedler (1971) was based on the view that managers have difficulty in altering the style which has helped them to achieve success, and that in fact they are not very flexible. It follows from this that trying to change a manager's style to fit the situation may be both useless and inefficient and, therefore, effective group performance could best be achieved by matching the manager to the situation or by changing the situation to match the manager.

The Contingency Approach

Research into trait and Behavioural approaches to effective leadership shows that it depend on many variables, in terms of individual personality, management style, corporate culture and the nature of the task to be performed. There is not one trait or approach which is effective in all situations. The contingency approach focuses on the situational factors which influence leadership.

The five extreme positions of the managerial grid by Blake and Mouton (1964)

(1) Country Club Management: Scores high on concern for people and low on concern for production. This management style may be based on a belief that the most important leadership activity is to secure the voluntary co-operation of group members in order to obtain high levels of productivity. Subordinates of these managers reports generally high level of satisfaction, but managers may be considered too easy going, soft mind and unable to make strict decisions.

(2) Authoritarian Management: Scores a high concern for production and efficiency and a low concern for people. This management style is task- oriented and stresses the quality of the decision over the wishes of subordinates. Such managers believe that groupcentered action may achieve mediocre results.

(3) Impoverished Management: Scores a low concern for both people and production. This management style does not provide leadership in a positive sense but believes in laissezfaire approach, relying on previous practice to keep the organization going.

(4) Middle-of-the –Road Management: Scores a moderate amount of concern for both people and production. Managers applying this believe in compromise, so that decisions are taken but only if endorsed by subordinates. These managers may be dependable and support the status quo, but are not likely to be dynamic leaders and may have difficulty facing up to innovation and change.

(5) Team Management: Scores high on concern for both people and production. Blake and Mouton argue that this management style provides the most effective leadership. These managers believe that concern for people and for tasks are compatible. They believe that tasks need to be carefully explained and decisions agreed with subordinates to achieve a high level of commitment.

The three factors of successful and effective leadership

(1) Leader- member relation: This is the most important factor in leader's effectiveness. The degree to which leaders have the acceptance, confidence, support and loyalty of subordinates is an essential feature of leader effectiveness. When these relations are strong the leader has a firm base from which to influence behaviour of subordinates.

(2) Task Structure: This is measured by the complexity or simplicity of the job to be carried out in an organization. Managers have considerable power where the work of employees is highly structured and routine, because, it is possible in these circumstances to establish very specific criteria to enforce a desired level of performance

(3) Leader's position power: The extent of formal or informal power which a manager is able to exert may be conferred on them by the organization in which they work and the position they hold in it. The chief executives or managing directors of a company will have a great deal of authority because of their position in a commercial organization.

the Four basic styles of Likert's systems of management

(1) Explosive Autocratic: Managers make all decisions. They decide what is to be done, who will do it and how and when it is to be accomplished. Failure to complete work as assigned will result in threats or punishment. Under this system, management exhibits little confidence or trust in employees.

(2) Benevolent Autocratic: Managers still make the decision, but employees have some degree of freedom and flexibility in performing their jobs so long as they conform to the specified procedures.

(3) Consultative: Managers consult with employees prior to establishing the goals and making decisions about the work. Employees have a considerable degree of freedom in making their own decisions as how to accomplish the work.

(4) Participative team: This is Likert's recommended system or style of management. The emphasis of the participative team is on a group participative role with full involvement of the employees in the process of establishing goals and making job related decisions. Employees feel free to discuss matters with their manager who displays supportive rather than condescending or threatening behavior.

The three main _forces' on a manager's mind in deciding a leadership style.

(1) Personal Forces: the managers own background , experience ,confidence and leadership inclinations;

(2) The characteristics of subordinates: the managers need to consider subordinates relative willingness or unwillingness to accept responsibility and take decisions;

(3) The Situation: The managers need to recognize the situation in which they find themselves , in terms of corporate culture , their colleagues style of work the nature of the tasks to be performed and time pressures

what is The Path- Goal Theory of Leadership

This theory was developed by Robert House (1971) and others as an approach to understanding and predicting leadership effectiveness in different situations. The Theory focuses on the leader as a source of rewards and attempts to predict how different types of rewards and different leadership styles affect the performance of subordinates, based on the view that an individual's motivation depends both on the expectation and the attractiveness of the rewards available. The manager identifies the _goal' and rewards which are available and the _paths' to be taken to reach them.

The Process of Effective Leadership

(1) Identifies and communicates to subordinates the path they should follow in order to achieve personal and organizational objectives;
(2) Helps subordinates along this path;
(3) Helps to remove obstacles on the path that might prevent the achievement of these Objectives

What is The Participatory Theory of Leadership

Vroom and Yetton (1973) developed a model of situational leadership in order to help managers decide when and to what extent they should involve employees in solving a particular problem. They suggested that managers needed to ask themselves a number of questions before deciding on an appropriate leadership style.

Vroom and Yetton defined five leadership styles in terms of the degree of participation by subordinates in the decision –making process.

(1) Autocratic I (AI) - Managers solve the problem or make the decisions themselves, using available information.
(2) Autocratic II (AII) - Managers obtain information from subordinates before making a decision, and then decide on the solution to the problem themselves. The role of subordinates is to provide information for decision making and they may or may not have been told what the information is for or what the problem is that needs to be solved.
(3) Consultative I (CI) - Managers share the problem with the relevant subordinates individually and obtain their ideas and information. Managers then make the decision, which may or may not be influenced by the subordinate's opinion.
(4) Consultative II (CII)-Managers share the problem with the relevant subordinates as a group and obtain their ideas and information. These may or may not be used in decision making.
(5) Group Participation (G) - Managers' share a problem with subordinates as a group. The managers and subordinates together analyze the problem and consider alternative solutions.

What is Leader-Member Exchange Theory

Most leadership theories assume that a leader behaves in much the same way towards all followers. In contrast, leader-member exchange theory holds that leadership is a one-on-one exchange in which leaders behave differently with different group members rather than the same with each member. It further holds that followers based on the quality of their interpersonal relationships (Exchanges) with a leader, form different group (higher quality and an out-group (lower quality)

What is Charismatic Leadership Theory

This is an extension of attribution theory. It says that followers make attributions of heroic or extraordinary leadership abilities when they observe certain behaviors. Studies on charismatic leadership have been directed at identifying those behaviors that differentiate charismatic leaders. Several authors have attempted to identify personal characteristics of the charismatic leader.

The Features of Charismatic Leaders

(1) Self confidence: They have complete confidence in their judgment and ability.
(2) A vision: This is an idealized goal that proposes a future better than the status quo. The greater the display between this idealized goal and the status quo, the more likely that followers will attribute extraordinary vision to the leader.

(3) Ability to articulate the vision: They are able to classify and state the vision in terms that are understandable to others. This articulation demonstrates an understanding of the follower's needs and hence acts as a motivating force.
(4) Strong conviction about the vision: Charismatic leaders are perceived as being strongly committed and willing to take on high personal risk, incur high costs and engage in selfsacrifice to achieve their visions.
(5) Behavior that is out of ordinary: Those with charisma engage in behavior that is perceived as being novel, unconventional and counter to norms. When successful, these behaviors evoke surprise and admiration in follower.
(6) Environment sensitivity: These leaders are able to make realistic assessments of the environmental constraints and resources needed to bring about change.

What is Transactional Leadership Theory

These kinds of leaders guide or motivate their followers in the direction of established goals by clarifying role and task requirements. However, there is another type of leader who inspires followers to transcend their own self- interest for the good of the organization and who is capable of having a profound and extraordinary effect on his or her followers

The Characteristics of Transactional Leadership

(1) Contingency Reward: Contacts exchange of rewards for effort, promise rewards for good performance, recognizes accomplishments.
(2) Management by Exception: Watches and searches for deviations from rules and standards, takes corrective action
(3) Laissez-Faire: Abdicates responsibilities avoids making decision.

What is Transformational Leadership Theory

Transformational leadership is built on top of transactional leadership- it produces level of subordinate effort and performance that go beyond what would occur with a transactional approach alone. Moreover, transformational leadership is more than charisma. The purely charismatic leader may want followers to adopt the charismatic's world view and go on further, the ability to question not only established views but evenly those established by the leader

Transformational leaders achieve performance beyond expectations through four leadership factors: charisma, inspiration, individualized consideration and intellectual stimulation.
(1) Charisma: Transformational leaders use charisma to provide followers with a clear vision of a desired future state, instill pride, and gain respect and trust.
(2) Inspiration: They use inspiration to excite their followers with the idea that they can achieve great things with extra effort.
(3) Individualized Consideration: They demonstrate individualized consideration. That is, they pay close attention to differences among followers, serve as mentors to those who need coaching and counseling, and treat each follower as an individual worthy of respect.
(4) Intellectual Stimulation: They provide followers with intellectual stimulation by promoting new ways of looking at old problems, viewing difficulties as challenges to be met, and emphasizing creative thinking and initiative.

The three main types of leadership styles used in an organization

Autocratic Leadership Style: It is a leadership situation where there is one-way communication, denial or conflict, an absolute monarch with unlimited authority. It is also a situation where the enterprise is run in a very autocratic, directive manner and the entire decision making process center around the entrepreneur under authoritarian leadership, the leader is the sole determiner of what is done. Autocratic leadership style calls for high goals and means control
Democratic Leadership Style: The leader is characterized by employee oriented and democratically supportive behaviors. He uses general supervision and is considerate of his subordinates. He is group centered and non-directive. Under this form of leadership, the leader consults with subordinates on proposed actions and decisions and encourages participation from them. He holds final responsibility but also delegate authority to others, who participate in determining work assignments, communication is active i.e. upward and downward. It also involves the leader including one or more employees in the decision making process.
Laissez-faire Leadership Style: This is the type of leadership in which the leader uses hi or her power very little, if at all. It involves given subordinates a high degree of independence in their operations. Under this type of leadership, leaders depend largely on subordinates to set their own goals and the means of achieving them. Leaders perceive their role as one of facilitating the operations of followers by furnishing them information and acting primarily as a contact with the group's external environment. It should be noted that there is no best form of leadership as the situation will determine the most appropriate form at a point in time.

The Other types of leadership styles

(1) Benevolent leadership style: They ensure that their staff follows procedures exactly. This is a very appropriate style for work involving serious safety risks or where large sums of money are involved.
(2) Charismatic Leadership Style: This can appear similar to a transformational leadership style, In that the leaders injects huge doses of enthusiasm into his or her team and is very energetic in driving others forward.
(3) People-Oriented Leadership Style: This style of leadership is when the leader totally focuses on organizing, supporting and developing the people in the leader's time.
(4) Servant -Leadership Style: This occurs when someone at any level within an organization, leads simply by virtue of meeting the needs of his or her team. In many ways, servant leadership is a form of democratic leadership as the whole team tends to be involved in decision making.
(5) Task-Oriented Leadership Style: A highly task-oriented leader focuses only on getting the job done, and can be quite autocratic. However, the task-oriented leaders spare little thought for the well-being of their teams, this approach can suffer many of the flaws of autocratic leadership with difficulties in motivating and retaining staffs.
(6) Transactional Leadership Style: This style of leadership starts that team members agree to obey their leader totally when they take a job on: the transaction is that the organization pays the team members, in return for their effort and compliance. As such, the leader has the right to punish team members if their work doesn't meet the pre-set standard.
(7) Transformational Leadership Style: A person with this leadership style is a true leader who inspires his or her team with a shared vision of the future. Transformational leaders are highly visible and spend a lot of time communicating. They don't necessarily lead from the front and they tend to delegate responsibility amongst their team.
(8) Situational Leadership Style: While the transformational leadership approach is often highly effective, there is no right way to leadership or management style that suits all situations. To choose the most effective approach, the following must be considered.

The Definition of servant leadership

Servant leadership emphasizes increased service to others, a holistic approach to work, promoting a sense of community, and the sharing of power in decision making. "A new kind of leadership model – a model which puts serving others as the number one priority. Servantleadership emphasizes increased service to others; a holistic approach to work; promoting a sense of community; and the sharing of power in decision-making

The Features of servant leaders

Listening

Leaders have traditionally been valued for their communication and decision-making skills. Although these are also important skills for the servant leader, they need to be reinforced by a deep commitment to listening intently to others. The servant leader seeks to identify the will of a group and helps to clarify that will.

Empathy

The servant leader strives to understand and empathize with others. People need to be accepted and recognized for their special and unique spirits. One assumes the good intentions of coworkers and colleagues and does not reject them as people, even when one may be forced torefuse to accept certain behaviors or performance.

Healing

The healing of relationships is a powerful force for transformation and integration. One of the great strengths of servant leadership is the potential for healing one's self and one's relationship to others. Many people have broken spirits and have suffered from a variety of emotional hurts. Although this is a part of being human, servant leaders recognize that they have an opportunity to help make whole those with whom they come in contact.

Awareness

General awareness, and especially self-awareness, strengthens the servant-leader. Awareness helps one in understanding issues involving ethics, power, and values. It lends itself to being able to view most situations from a more integrated, holistic position.

Persuasion

Another characteristic of servant leaders is reliance on persuasion, rather than on one's positional authority, in making decisions within an organization. The servant leader seeks to convince others, rather than coerce compliance.

Conceptualization

Servant leaders seek to nurture their abilities to dream great dreams. The ability to look at a problem or an organization from a conceptualizing perspective means that one must think beyond day-to-day realities. For many leaders, this is a characteristic that requires discipline and practice.

Foresight

Closely related to conceptualization, the ability to foresee the likely outcome of a situation is hard to define, but easier to identify. One knows foresight when one experiences it. Foresight is a characteristic that enables the servant leader to understand the lessons from the past, the realities of the present, and the likely consequence of a decision for the future.

Stewardship

Peter Block (1993)—author of Stewardship and The Empowered Manager—has defined stewardship as —holding something in trust for another‖ (p. xx). Robert Greenleaf's view of all institutions was one in which CEO's, staffs, and trustees all played significant roles in holding their institutions in trust for the greater good of society

Commitment to the Growth of People

Servant leaders believe that people have an intrinsic value beyond their tangible contributions as workers. As such, the servant leader is deeply committed to the growth of each and every individual within his or her organization. The servant leader recognizes the tremendous responsibility to do everything in his or her power to nurture the personal and professional growth of employees and colleagues. In practice, this can include (but is not limited to) concrete actions such as making funds available for personal and professional development, taking a personal interest in the ideas and suggestions from everyone, encouraging worker involvement in decision-making, and actively assisting laid-off employees to find other positions.

What is the Concept of Change change could be defined as everything from re-engineering, right sizing, restructuring to cultural change. According to Ajayi (2002), change is an illogical and emotional process. Arguably, Change as a process was first been conceptualized by Lewin in 1947. He divided the change as a process into three phases: (1) unfreezing—it is about readiness to change means it involves getting a point of an understanding that change is necessary and to be prepare for leaving the current state of comfort for the sake of future benefits; (2) moving—At this stage, people have to move forward to adopt a new changed setup. People are most fearful from this stage of change process as they have to leave their current comfort zone; and (3) refreezing. At last, change is accepted as a new norm in an organization and now the change is a part of routine process

Nikols, (2016) defined change management in four basic dimensions which are;

(a) The task of managing change: The first and most obvious definition of —change management‖ is that the term refers to the task of managing change. The obvious is not necessarily unambiguous. Managing change is itself a term that has at least two meanings

(b) An area of professional practice: Today, change management has become an area for scholars to study. In almost all cases, the process of change is treated separately from the specifics of the situation. It is expertise in this task of managing the general process of change that is laid claim to by professional change agents.

(c) A body of Knowledge: Stemming from the view of change management as an area of professional practice there arises yet a third definition of change management: the content or subject matter of change management. This consists chiefly of the models, methods and techniques, tools, skills and other forms of knowledge that go into making up any practice.

(d) A control Mechanism: consisting of requirements, standards, processes and procedures. This last functional definition of change management helps to explain the dynamics of what a true change management procedure should be.

The leaders as agent of change must exhibit the following qualities;

(1) Coaching

Coaching is the process of improving performance by developing synergistic relationships with employees through training, counseling, confronting, and mentoring. It is designed to maximize employee strengths and minimize weaknesses, resulting in improved performance due to greater awareness. Coaching skills enable leaders to question the status quo, approach situations from new perspectives, and allow others to make and learn from mistakes

(2) Communication

Informing subordinates about impending change is vital if the change process must be successful. Leaders are responsible for __communicating to the organization the risks in clinging to the status quo and the potential rewards of embracing a radically different future''.Leadership ambivalence weakens claims of legitimacy for change and enables recipients to cling to reasons for resistance

(3) Involving Others

Involving employees in change decision making is paramount if you are prepared for such change resistance. Employee involvement (EI) increases workers' input into decisions that affect their well-being and organizational performance. Lawler, Mohrman, and Ledford's (1982) long-term study of Fortune 1000 firms revealed positive trends in use of employee involvement programmes within these firms, along with a growing number of employee participation in EI programs

(4) Motivation

Motivation is the influence or drive that causes us to behave in a specific manner and has been described as consisting of energy, direction, and sustainability. In an organizational context, a leader's ability to persuade and influence others to work in a common direction reflects his or her talent to motivate

(5) Rewarding

LeBoeuf (1985) suggested that leaders secure desired results through a compensation and reward philosophy that recognizes employees for the right performance. Rewarding change efforts demonstrates the importance of and need for change, along with leaders' understanding that "the things that get rewarded get done"

(6) Promoting Teamwork

The synergistic benefits of teamwork enable members working cooperatively with one another to achieve more than by working independently

the MAJOR PROBLEM OF LEADERSHIP IN NIGERIA

(1) Incompetency and Mediocrity: Since independence, Nigeria's presidency has been occupied by men who are grossly incompetent and lack political will to put things straight and right. No one can give what he didn't have. They are theoreticians than practitioners. They intentionally appoints mediocre to work with them just to loot the treasury without query. Repeatedly, many of Nigeria's leaders picks mediocre as successors just to have a clean track record after committing crimes that are above the laws. But this is grossly not sustainable, the Nigeria's economic soul cries for rescue.

(2) Ethnicity and Tribalism: The three largest groups (Hausa-Fulani, Igbo, and Yoruba) have virtually nothing in common politically, socially, or historically. The overwhelming majority of Nigerians only speak their "home" language, and if they learn another, it is invariably English and not one of the other indigenous tongues. History of ethnic bigotry in Nigeria can be traced back to 1946, during the colonial era when Sir Arthur Richard, Nigeria then Governor General introduced a Regional Government. He divided Nigeria into NEW. An acronym that stands for Northern, Eastern and Western Nigeria. With each region headed by a Premier.

(3) Mono-economy: Since Oil was discovered on Sunday 15 January 1956 at Oloibiri Oilfield by Shell Darcy, Nigeria has depended on it solely by neglecting her previous foreign exchange brands i.e Cocoa, wool, Coal, groundnut, fish etc. At the discovery of all, everyone jubilated that the era of want should soon be over. But the opposite was the case. Some has argued that Oil killed the giant in Nigeria. Since its discovery, Nigeria has been plunged into a number of leadership related problem i.e greed, egocentrism, intolerance, fraud, misappropriation and diversion of national fund for personal use, oil theft and financial stealing etc.

(4) Greed and Financial Corruption: Cases of corruption, misappropriation and greed has been well established in Africa's most populous nation-Nigeria. This has historical antecedents from the colonial masters, the defunct regional government, then military regime and the republics.

(5) Insincerity and hypocrisy: One of the major problems identified under poor leadership in Nigeria is the insincerity of mind and action of its leaders. Nigeria for the past 56 years has been unlucky, very unlucky to have crop of opportunists than leaders whose only interest is their pocket. Nigeria leaders often prefer everything to go bad and wrong than to arrest the anticipated issue before it gets out of hand. They are never sincere since the sufferings of Nigerians means nothing to them

(6) Lack of National Identity: Every government for itself. A Judas in the last government is a saint in the new government. No sense of nationhood but cabalism. Go to America, England, China and even Ghana, you will see true sense of nationhood. Where a citizen will tell you _I am a Ghanaian… American… British etc' This is not so in Nigeria. Nigeria's presidents are often identified with their tribal and religion identities in dressing, appointments and deeds. Most of Nigeria's leaders are insensitive and orcarefree. To then worsen the case, they prefer to even be identified with their politicalparty and even inner caucus within the micro-segment of the party the definition of corporate governance

It is a system of structuring, operating and controlling a company with a view to achieve long term strategic goals to satisfy shareholders, creditors, employees, customers and suppliers, and complying with the legal and regulatory requirements, apart from meeting environmental and local community needs

The Objectives of Corporate Governance

1. A properly structured Board capable of taking independent and objective decisions is in place at the helm of affairs; 2. The Board is balanced as regards the representation of adequate number of non-executive and independent directors who will take care of the interests and well-being of all the stakeholders; 3. The Board adopts transparent procedures and practices and arrives at decisions on the strength of adequate information;
4. The Board has an effective machinery to sub serve the concerns of stakeholders; 5. The Board keeps the shareholders informed of relevant developments impacting the company; 6. The Board effectively and regularly monitors the functioning of the management team; 7. The Board remains in effective control of the affairs of the company at all times.

According to the Peng (2001), government intervention in the area of corporate governance is likely to be most effective in attracting capital if focused on four essential areas:

Fairness: Ensuring the protection of shareholder rights, including the rights of minority and foreign shareholders, and ensuring the enforceability of contracts with resource providers

Transparency: Requiring timely disclosure of adequate, clear and comparable information concerning corporate financial performance, corporate governance and corporate ownership

Accountability: Clarifying governance roles and responsibilities, and supporting voluntary efforts to ensure the alignment of managerial and shareholder interests, as monitored by boards of director and·

Responsibility: Ensuring corporate compliance with the other laws and regulations that reflect the respective society's values.

The Corporate Governance Theories

Agency Theory

Much of the research into corporate governance derives from agency theory. Since the early work of Berle and Means in 1932, corporate governance has focused upon the separation of ownership and pedals which results in principal-agent problems arising from the dispersed ownership in the modern corporation. They regarded corporate governance as a mechanism where a board of directors is a crucial monitoring device to minimize the problems brought about by the principal-agent relationship. In this context, agents are the managers, principals are the owners and the boards of directors act as the monitoring mechanism

The agency role of the directors refers to the governance function of the board of directors in serving the shareholders by ratifying the decisions made by the managers and monitoring the implementation of those decisions

Stakeholder Theory

This theory centers on the issues concerning the stakeholders in an institution. It stipulates that a corporate entity invariably seeks to provide a balance between the interests of its diverse stakeholders in order to ensure that each interest constituency receives some degree of satisfaction. Stakeholder theory has become more prominent because many researchers have recognized that the activities of a corporate entity impact on the external environment requiring accountability of the organization to a wider audience than simply its shareholders.

The stakeholders classification

Resource Dependency Theory

The basic proposition of resource dependence theory is the need for environmental linkages between the firm and outside resources. In this perspective, directors serve to connect the firm with external factors by co-opting the resources needed to survive.

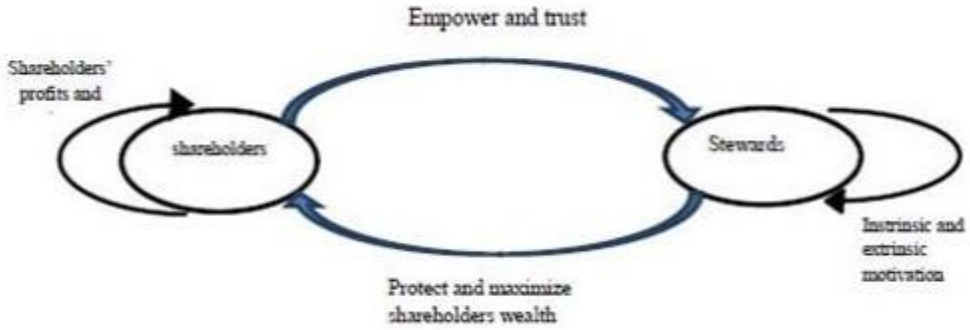

The organization‘s need to require resources and these leads to the development of exchange relationships or network governance between organizations. Further, the uneven distribution of needed resources results in interdependence in organizational relationships. Several factors would appear to intensify the character of this dependence, e.g. the importance of the resource(s), the relative shortage of the resource(s) and the extent to which theresource(s) is concentrated in the environment

Stewardship Theory

In contrast to agency theory, stewardship theorypresents a different model of management, where managers are considered good stewards who will act in the best interest of the owners. The fundamentals of stewardship theory are based on social psychology, which focuses on the behavior of executives. The steward‘s behavior is proorganizational and collectivists, and has higher utility than individualistic self-serving behavior and the steward‘s behavior will not depart from the interest of the organization because the steward seeks to attain the objectives of the organization. According to Smallman (2004), where shareholder wealth is maximized, the steward‘s utilities are maximized too, because organizational success will serve most requirements and the stewards will have a clear mission. He also states that, stewards balance tensions between different beneficiaries and other interest groups. Therefore stewardship theory is an argument put forward in firm performance that satisfies the requirements of the interested parties resulting in dynamic performance equilibrium for balanced governance

Social Contract Theory

Among other theories reviewed in corporate governance literature social contract theory, sees society as a series of social contracts between members of society and society itself. There is a school of thought which sees social responsibility as a contractual obligation the firm owes to society. An integrated social contract theory was developed by Donaldson and Dunfee (1999) as a way for managers make ethical decision making, which refers to macro-social and micro-social contracts.

Legitimacy Theory

Another theory reviewed in the corporate governance literature is legitimacy theory. Legitimacy theory is defined as ―a generalized perception or assumption that the actions of an entity are desirable, proper, or appropriate with some socially constructed systems of norms, values, beliefs and definitions‖.Similar to social contract theory, legitimacy theory is based upon the notion that there is a social contract between the society and an organization. A firm receives permission to operate from the society and is ultimately accountable to the society for how it operates and what it does, because society provides corporations the authority to own and use natural resources and to hire employees

Political Theory

Political theory brings the approach of developing voting support from shareholders, rather by purchasing voting power. Hence having a political influence in corporate governance may direct corporate governance within the organization. Public interest is much reserved as the government participates in corporate decision making, taking into consideration cultural challenges. The political model highlights the allocation of corporate power, profits and privileges are determined via the governments' favour. The political model of corporate governance can have an immense influence on governance developments. Over the last decades, the government of a country has been seen to have a strong political influence on firms. As a result, there is an entrance of politics into the governance structure or firms' mechanism

the responsibilities of board of directors

1. The board of directors should be in firm control of the affairs of the company in a lawful, efficient and effective manner, such that the organization may increasingly improve on its value creation; and
2. The board should, with due regard to the other stakeholders' interests, ensure that the Value created is shared among the interested parties such as the shareholders and employees.
3. The board should ensure transparency, accountability, equity and fairness among all organisations' players.

The functions of board of directors

1. Strategic planning
2. Selection, performance appraisal and compensation of senior executive members;
3. Succession planning
4. Communicating with the shareholders
5. Ensuring the integrity of financial controls and reports; and
6. Ensuring that ethical standards are maintained and that the company complies with the laws of Nigeria.

The Composition of Board of Directors

1. The board should be composed in such a way as to ensure the diversity of experience, without compromising compatibility, integrity, availability and independence;
2. Membership of the board should rest on the following attributes: Uprightness in character;
 Distinctive competencies;
 Knowledge on board matters;
 Entrepreneurial bias; and
 Sense of accountability, integrity, commitment to the task of corporate and institutional building.
3. The position of the chairman and chief executive officer should ideally be separated and held by different persons;
4. There should be a strong non-executive independent director as vice chairman of the board, where the position of the chairman and chief executive officer are combined in one individual.

The Role of Shareholders

According to Beasley, (1996). The following are identified rights and privileges of shareholders:
1. The company, through the directors, should ensure that shareholders' statutory and general rights are protected every time;
2. It should be the responsibility of the shareholders to elect directors and approve the terms and conditions of their directorship positions;
3. The venue of the annual general meeting should be carefully chosen such that the shareholders could attend and vote and not be disenfranchised as a result of distance and cost;
4. Before the annual general meeting, notices should be dispatched at least 21 working days, with such details and annual reports, audited financial statements and other information that would enable the shareholders to vote properly on any issue.
5. A separate resolution should be proposed by the board at the general meeting on each substantive issue in such a way that they could be voted for in an organized manner;
6. The board has to ensure that decisions reached at the general meetings are implemented;
7. There ought to be at least one director on the board to represent minority shareholders;
8. Unless they are in a competing business or have conflicts of interest that warrant their exclusion, shareholders holding more than 20% of the total issued share capital of the company should have a representative on the board;
9. The board should ensure equal treatment for all shareholders, such that none is given preferential treatment or superior access to information or other materials; and
10. The annual general meeting should be recognized by the board as the most potent avenue to communicate with the shareholders and encourage their participation.

The Role of Audit Committee

The committee has the following objectives:
1. Increasing public confidence in the credibility and objectivity of published financial statements
2. Assisting the directors, especially the non-objective directors, in meeting their responsibilities of financial reporting
3. Strengthening the independent position of a firm's external auditors by providing an additional channel of communication the Qualification and Experience of Members of an Audit Committee

1. Members of an audit committee should be able to read and understand basic financial statements and make valuable contributions to the committee's deliberation;
2. An audit committee should review not only external auditor's report but also, most importantly, the report of the internal auditor;
3. Members of the committee should possess the following qualities:
 Integrity;
 Dedication;
 Thorough understanding of the business, its products and services;

The Principles of OECD

Fairness: The OECD Principles expand on the concept of ―fairness‖ with two separate principles.
Principle I states that: ―The corporate governance framework should protectshareholders' rights.‖ Generally, this Principle recognizes that shareholders are property owners, and as owners of a legally recognized and divisible share of a company, shareholders have the right to hold or convey their interest in the company
Principle II also relates to ―fairness‖ in holding that: ―The corporate governance framework should ensure the equitable treatment of all shareholders, including minority and foreign shareholders.
All shareholders should have the opportunity to obtain effective redress for violation of their rights.‖ This means that the legal framework should include laws that protect the rights of minority shareholders against misappropriation of assets or self-dealing by controlling shareholders, managers or directors
Responsibility: Principle III translates ―responsibility‖ to mean that: ―The corporate governance framework should recognize the rights of stakeholders as established by law and encourage active co-operation between corporations and stakeholders in creating wealth, jobs, and the sustainability of financially sound enterprises.‖ This recognizes that corporations must abide by the laws and regulations of the countries in which they operate, but that every nation must decide for itself the values it wishes to express in law and the corporate citizenship requirements it wishes to impose
Transparency: Principle IV states that: ―The corporate governance framework should ensure that timely and accurate disclosure is made on all material matters regarding the corporation, including the financial situation, performance, ownership and governance of the company
‖ This recognizes that investors and shareholders need information about the performance of the company -- its financial and operating results -- as well as information about corporate objectives and material foreseeable risk factors to monitor their investment. Financial information prepared in accordance with high-quality standards of accounting and audit should be subject to an annual audit by an independent auditor
Accountability: Principle V states: The corporate governance framework should protect shareholders' rights.‖ The corporate governance framework should ensure that timely and accurate disclosure is made on all material matters regarding the corporation, including the financial situation, performance, ownership and governance of the company

The four principles of corporate governance

fairness, transparency, accountability and responsibility

explain the practice of governance

Common stockholders have the right to elect their representatives on the board of directors of a corporation. Members of the board of directors assume the responsibility of monitoring, directing and appointing the firm's managers. In this manner disperse shareholders are potentially empowered in setting direction, monitoring performance, and controlling distribution of profits of the corporation. In particular, this internal control mechanism is purported to integrate the interests of common stockholders and the executive managers of a corporation by rewarding good corporate performance. The board of directors has the right and responsibility to remove poorly performing managers. Historically, dissatisfied shareholders have ―walked away‖ from the corporation by selling their shares at depressed prices and thereby incurring losses. Alternatively, major shareholders either through hostile actions, ―investor activism,‖ or a friendly approach, ―relationship investing,‖ have pursued their objectives of monitoring corporate managers. Furthermore to the extent U.S. corporate laws permit, competing managers would remove incompetent ones and take over poorly performing firms
In particular, corporate actions that have direct effects on shareholders' wealth are assumed to be communicated to them in a timely manner.
. Investors pursue different approaches for maintaining corporate internal control for the purpose of creating a well-functioning business enterprise. The underlying reason for the corporate governance system is the stakeholders' pursuit for preserving their respective share of profit earned by business enterprises governance, may be summarized as follow:

• Adoption of good governance practices stability and growth to the enterprise.
• Good governance system, demonstrated by adoption of good corporate governance practices, builds confidence amongst stakeholders as well as prospective stakeholders.
• In today's knowledge driven economy, demonstrating excellence in skills has become the ultimate tool in the hands of board of directors to leverage competitive advantage.
• Adoption of good corporate governance practices provides long-term sustenance andstrengthens stakeholders' relationship.
• A good corporate citizen becomes an icon and enjoys a position of respect.
• Potential stakeholders aspire to enter into relationships with enterprises whosegovernance credentials are exemplary.

Explain corporate governance rating/benchmarking and due process.

According to SEBI sources, SEBI has no intention to making rating of governance of listed companies mandatory. According to SEBI, it may be wrong to conclude that governance norms compelled companies to sacrifice long-term interests or outlook in the pursuit of short-term interests and responses to market signals (Albaum & Peterson, 2012). SEBI has commissioned a study to determine the cost of compliance incurred by companies in respect of the regulatory framework, including Clause of the listing agreement. The Narayana Murthy committee on corporate governance code had gone about its work in a highly professional and democratic manner and SEBI wanted that the professionals should study the issues raised and its recommendations, including the proposal for facilitation of _whistle blowing'; ICRA which rated companies, adopted certain parameters and procedures for the purpose and the agency clarified that it normally required four to six weeks and the rating was not an audit or certification of regulatory compliance by the listed company and the exercise was not a guarantee against fraud (Anderson, Mansi, & Reeb,2012). Its primary focus in the rating was on the business processes. Key variables analyzed in rating included the shareholding structure, governance structure, management processes, board structure and processes, stakeholder relationship, transparency and disclosures and financial discipline (Berle, & Means, 2010). Measuring Corporate governance practice: It may be noted that Standard & Poor has recently launched a new service, known as Corporate Governance Scores, to evaluate corporate governance practices, both at a country and at a company level. In the case of country governance assessment, the analysis starts with an evaluation of governance issues at the country level (Cole & Mehran, 2010).

What are the factors of good governance?

• Adoption of good governance practices stability and growth to the enterprise.
• Good governance system, demonstrated by adoption of good corporate governance practices, builds confidence amongst stakeholders as well as prospective stakeholders.
• In today's knowledge driven economy, demonstrating excellence in skills has become the ultimate tool in the hands of board of directors to leverage competitive advantage.
• Adoption of good corporate governance practices provides long-term sustenance and strengthens stakeholders' relationship.
• A good corporate citizen becomes an icon and enjoys a position of respect.
• Potential stakeholders aspire to enter into relationships with enterprises whose governance credentials are exemplary.

What is shareholder activism

Shareholder activism involves the task of aggressive monitoring and controlling the firm's management for the purpose of enforcing changes in the firm's structure of internal control and increasing shareholders wealth. It is generally found that shareholder activism tend to be beneficial to all investors in terms of appreciation of their wealth.

What is leadership? Mention any three types of leadership styles you know.

Autocratic Leadership Style: It is a leadership situation where there is one-way communication, denial or conflict, an absolute monarch with unlimited authority. It is also a situation where the enterprise is run in a very autocratic, directive manner and the entire decision making process center around the entrepreneur under authoritarian leadership, the leader is the sole determiner of what is done. Autocratic leadership style calls for high goals and means control.

Democratic Leadership Style: The leader is characterized by employee oriented and democratically supportive behaviors. He uses general supervision and is considerate of his subordinates. He is group centered and non-directive. Under this form of leadership, the leader consults with subordinates on proposed actions and decisions and encourages participation from them. He holds final responsibility but also delegate authority to others, who participate in determining work assignments, communication is active i.e. upward and downward. It also involves the leader including one or more employees in the decision making process.

Laissez-faire Leadership Style: This is the type of leadership in which the leader uses hi or her power very little, if at all. It involves given subordinates a high degree of independence in their operations. Under this type of leadership, leaders depend largely on subordinates to set their own goals and the means of achieving them. Leaders perceive their role as one of facilitating the operations of followers by furnishing them information and acting primarily as a contact with the group's external environment.

Explain any five types of leadership style?

(1) Benevolent leadership style: They ensure that their staff follows procedures exactly. This is a very appropriate style for work involving serious safety risks or where large sums of money are involved.

(2) Charismatic Leadership Style: This can appear similar to a transformational leadership style, In that the leaders injects huge doses of enthusiasm into his or her team and is very energetic in driving others forward.

(3) People-Oriented Leadership Style: This style of leadership is when the leader totally focuses on organizing, supporting and developing the people in the leader's time.

(4) Servant -Leadership Style: This occurs when someone at any level within an organization, leads simply by virtue of meeting the needs of his or her team.

(5) Task-Oriented Leadership Style: A highly task-oriented leader focuses only on getting the job done, and can be quite autocratic. However, the task-oriented leaders spare little thought for the well-being of their teams, this approach can suffer many of the flaws of autocratic leadership with difficulties in motivating and retaining staffs.

(6) Transactional Leadership Style: This style of leadership starts that team members agree to obey their leader totally when they take a job on: the transaction is that the organization pays the team members, in return for their effort and compliance.

According to the Peng (2001) what are the elements of effective corporate governance?

Fairness: Ensuring the protection of shareholder rights, including the rights of minority and foreign shareholders, and ensuring the enforceability of contracts with resource providers

Transparency: Requiring timely disclosure of adequate, clear and comparable information concerning corporate financial performance, corporate governance and corporate ownership

Accountability: Clarifying governance roles and responsibilities, and supporting voluntary efforts to ensure the alignment of managerial and shareholder interests, as monitored by boards of director and·

Responsibility: Ensuring corporate compliance with the other laws and regulations that reflect the respective society's values.

 Honesty: The number one quality identified by this researchers is honesty. The respondents explain that a good leader must be honest to the oath of office that saw him to power and also to his numbers of followers. They added that a good leader must be morally upright, unpretentious, reasonable in situations and impartial.
 Forward Oriented: A good leader must be forward oriented. He must always see the goal to be achieved and the challenges ahead. He must have the —Can Do‖ behavior within him. This quality is very close in comparison with the Conceptual skill of leadership. This means seeing things before others and the ability to predict or forecast what tomorrow will bring.
 Competence: A good leader must be competent technically, human relation wisely. He must not be a specialist in a field but a generalist. He must be able to lead others to the very rightful part. He must have the ability to propel others to achieve results.
 Inspiring: A good leader must be able to inspire his followers to attain goal and objectives. He must be able to stimulate others to do things and make things happen.
 Intelligent: A good and effective leader must be intelligent. He must be sensible and rational. He must be a first class decision maker; he must be able to correct anomalies within his team.

Explain the concept of transformational leadership?

Transformational leadership is built on top of transactional leadership- it produces level of subordinate effort and performance that go beyond what would occur with a transactional approach alone. Moreover, transformational leadership is more than charisma. The purely charismatic leader may want followers to adopt the charismatic's world view and go on further, the ability to question not only established views but evenly those established by the leader. This has its belief that the challenges facing the world in the new millennium require a new kind of leadership. Advocates of this belief describe what has been dubbed transformational leadership as consisting of two complementary roles: the mover-and –shaker and the gentle persuader. In the first, the mover –and –shakers achieves a transformation in an organization's fortunes and is, therefore, described as a transforming leader. In the second, as a gentle persuader, the transforming leader converts followers into leaders for the good of the whole, to consider long term rather than immediate needs, and to become more aware and accepting of an organization's goal.

What are the main aspects of transformational leadership?

(1) Charisma: Transformational leaders use charisma to provide followers with a clear vision of a desired future state, instill pride, and gain respect and trust.
(2) Inspiration: They use inspiration to excite their followers with the idea that they can achieve great things with extra effort.
(3) Individualized Consideration: They demonstrate individualized consideration. That is, they pay close attention to differences among followers, serve as mentors to those who need coaching and counseling, and treat each follower as an individual worthy of respect.
(4) Intellectual Stimulation: They provide followers with intellectual stimulation by promoting new ways of looking at old problems, viewing difficulties as challenges to be met, and emphasizing creative thinking and initiative.

List and explain any four leadership theories you know?

Leader-Member Exchange Theory

Most leadership theories assume that a leader behaves in much the same way towards all followers. In contrast, leader-member exchange theory holds that leadership is a one-on-one exchange in which leaders behave differently with different group members rather than the same with each member. It further holds that followers based on the quality of their interpersonal relationships (Exchanges) with a leader, form different group (higher quality and an out-group (lower quality).Insiders and outsiders experience very different work outcomes. Leader interactions with insiders resemble social transactions, with leaders and followers exchanging resources and enjoying higher levels of trust and support.

Charismatic Leadership Theory

This is an extension of attribution theory. It says that followers make attributions of heroic or extraordinary leadership abilities when they observe certain behaviors. Studies on charismatic leadership have been directed at identifying those behaviors that differentiate charismatic leaders. Several authors have attempted to identify personal characteristics of the charismatic leader.

Transactional Leadership

Theory Most of the leadership theories presented like the Ohio State studies, Fiedler's model, path-goal theory and the leader participation model have concerned transactional leader. These kinds of leaders guide or motivate their followers in the direction of established goals by clarifying role and task requirements. However, there is another type of leader who inspires followers to transcend their own self- interest for the good of the organization and who is capable of having a profound and extraordinary effect on his or her followers.

Define the concept of servant leadership?

Servant leadership emphasizes increased service to others, a holistic approach to work, promoting a sense of community, and the sharing of power in decision making. "A new kind of leadership model – a model which puts serving others as the number one priority. Servantleadership emphasizes increased service to others; a holistic approach to work; promoting a sense of community; and the sharing of power in decision-making

Each of these central variables is explained individually below:

1. Service to Others: Servant-leadership begins when a leader assumes the position of servant in their interactions with followers. Authentic, legitimate leadership arises not from the exercise of power or self-interested actions, but from a fundamental desire to first help others.

2. Holistic Approach to Work: Servant-leadership holds that —The work exists for the person as much as the person exists for the work. It challenges organizations to rethink the relationships that exist between people, organizations and society as a whole. The theory promotes a view that individuals should be encouraged to be who they are, in their professional as well as personal lives.

3. Promoting a Sense of community: Greenleaf lamented the loss of community in modern society, calling it —the lost knowledge of these times‖. Servant-leadership questions the institution's ability to provide human services, and argues that only community, defined as groups of individuals that are jointly liable for each other both individually and as a unit, can perform this function

4. Sharing of Power in Decision-Making: Effective servant-leadership is best evidenced by the cultivation of servant-leadership in others. By nurturing participatory, empowering environments, and encouraging the talents of followers, the servant-leader creates a more effective, motivated workforce and ultimately a more successful organization.

List and explain any five Problem of Leadership in Nigeria?

(1) Incompetency and Mediocrity: Since independence, Nigeria's presidency has been occupied by men who are grossly incompetent and lack political will to put things straight and right. No one can give what he didn't have. They are theoreticians than practitioners. They intentionally appoints mediocre to work with them just to loot the treasury without query. Repeatedly, many of Nigeria's leaders picks mediocre as successors just to have a clean track record after committing crimes that are above the laws. But this is grossly not sustainable, the Nigeria's economic soul cries for rescue.

(2) Ethnicity and Tribalism: The three largest groups (Hausa-Fulani, Igbo, and Yoruba) have virtually nothing in common politically, socially, or historically. government, then military regime and the republics.

(5) Insincerity and hypocrisy: One of the major problems identified under poor leadership in Nigeria is the insincerity of mind and action of its leaders. Nigeria for the past 56 years has been unlucky, very unlucky to have crop of opportunists than leaders whose only interest is their pocket. Nigeria leaders often prefer everything to go bad and wrong than to arrest the anticipated issue before it gets out of hand. They are never sincere since the sufferings of Nigerians means nothing to them

Leadership is a concept with vast definitions from different authors and Entrepreneurs. Write any Ten (10) different definitions of the concept of leadership.

—Leadership is a function of knowing yourself, having a vision that is well communicated, building trust among colleagues, and taking effective action to realize your own leadership potential, (Bennis,1997)‖.

—Leadership is a process of giving purpose (meaningful direction) to collective effort, and causing willing effort to be expended to achieve purpose (Jacobs & Jacques, 1990: 281)‖.

—Leadership is a process of influence between a leader and those who are followers‖. Hollander (1978, p.1)

—Leadership is a process whereby an individual influences a group of individuals to achieve a common goal‖. Northouse (2004, p 3)

—Leadership is an attempt at influencing the activities of followers through the communication process and toward the attainment of some goal or goals‖ Donelly et al (1985 p362.).

—Leadership is an influence process that enable managers to get their people to do willingly what must be done, do well what ought to be done‖ Cribbin (1981).

—Leadership is defined as the process of influencing the activities of an organized group toward goal achievement.‖ Rauch & Behling (1984, p.46)

—Leadership is discovering the company's destiny and having the courage to follow it.‖ Joe (1996)

—Leadership is the ability to not only understand and utilize your innate talents, but to also effectively leverage the natural strengths of your team to accomplish the mission. There is no one-size fits all approach, answer key or formula to leadership. Leadership should be the humble, authentic expression of your unique personality in pursuit of bettering whatever environment you are in‖ – Katie Christy, founder, Activate Your Talent

—Leadership is about having a selfless heart and always being willing to reach out and lend a helping hand‖ – Bob Reina, CEO and founder, Talk Fusion

—Leadership is about playing to strengths and addressing weaknesses in the most productive and efficient way possible. It's about knowing your team and yourself, and doing your best job to set both up for success‖– Sammy Cohen, co-founder, Neon Bandits

—Leadership is the ability to see a problem and be the solution. So many people are willing to talk about problems or can even empathize, but not many can see the problem or challenge and rise to it. It takes a leader to truly see a problem as a challenge and want to drive toward it. That is what causes people to want to follow, and a true leader has a following‖ – Andrea WalkerLeidy, owner, Walker Publicity Consulting

—Leadership is having the humility to put your employees first so that the company can grow. Leaders should invest time [in] employees and make sure that they feel comfortable in the workplace. This increases the functionality and efficiency of the company‖ – Matthew Adams, director of communications, Tru-Colour Bandages

—A leader is someone [who] leads by example and has the integrity to do the right thing even when it is not popular. A good leader has positive influence over others, inspiring them to become a better person and example for others to model their life against, as well‖ – Mark Little, founder and president, Diversified Funding

Briefly explain any five (5) principles of leadership.

 Know yourself and seek self-improvement - In order to know yourself, you have to understand your be, know, and do, attributes. Seeking self-improvement means continually strengthening your attributes. This can be accomplished through selfstudy, formal classes, reflection, and interacting with others.

 Be technically proficient - As a leader, you must know your job and have a solid familiarity with your employees' tasks.

 Seek responsibility and take responsibility for your actions - Search for ways to guide your organization to new heights. And when things go wrong, they always do sooner or later -- do not blame others. Analyze the situation, take corrective action, and move on to the next challenge.

 Make sound and timely decisions - Use good problem solving, decision making, and planning tools.
 Set the example - Be a good role model for your employees. They must not only hear what they are expected to do, but also see. We must become the change we want to see - Mahatma Gandhi.
 Know your people and look out for their well-being - know human nature and the importance of sincerely caring for your workers.
 Keep your workers informed - know how to communicate with not only them, but also seniors and other key people.

Briefly describe any five (5) types of Leaders.

 Charismatic leader: This is a leader who gains influence mainly from strength of personality. The difficulty with charismatic leadership is that few people possessed the exceptional qualities required to transform all around them into willing followers. Another issue is that personal qualities or traits of leadership cannot be acquired by training; they can only be modified by it.
 Traditional leader: This is a leader whose position is assured by birth e.g. kings, queens and tribal chieftains. This is another category to which few people can aspire. Except inthe small family business, there are few opportunities for traditional leadership at work.
 Situational leader: This is a leader whose influence can only be effective by being in the right place at the right time. The kind of leadership is temporary in nature to be of much value in a business. What is looked for is someone who is capable of assuming a leadership role in a variety of situations over a period of time.
 Appointed leader: This is a leader whose influence arises directly out of his position e.g. most managers and supervisors. This is the bureaucratic type of leadership where legitimate power springs from the nature and scope of the position within the hierarchy.
 Functional leader: This is a leader who secures their leadership positions by what they are. In other words, functional leaders adapt their behaviour to meet the competing needs of the situation

Briefly discuss the five (5) sources of leadership power.

(1) Legitimate power: This is based on one's hierarchical position the corporation president has greater legitimate power than the vice-president of manufacturing to speak on issues of corporate policy; by the same token, the vice-president of manufacturing has more legitimate power than the first line supervisor to decide on issues of capital expenditures, work floe, inventory levels etc.
(2) Reward power: This stems from the control of rewards valued by subordinates. Subordinates who act as their supervisors tell them to do so in past because they believe that their behavior will be rewarded.
(3) Coercive power: This is based on fear. If subordinates alter their behavior because they believe that a failure in company with orders from a superior will lead to punishment, they are responding to coercion.
(4) Reference power: This is based on the followers' identification with the leader. This identification may be based on personal admiration and usually includes a desire by the followers to be like the leader.
(5) Expert power: This stems from the perceived and demonstrated competencies of leaders to implement, analyze, evaluate and control the tasks assigned to their group.

Define servant leadership servant leadership is a form of democratic leadership as the whole team tends to be involved in decision making. Supporters of the servant leadership model suggest it is an important way ahead in a world where values are increasingly important, in which servant leaders achieve power on the basis of their values and deals

Discuss any four (4) major characteristics of a servant leader.

Listening

Leaders have traditionally been valued for their communication and decision-making skills. Although these are also important skills for the servant leader, they need to be reinforced by a deep commitment to listening intently to others.

Empathy

The servant leader strives to understand and empathize with others. People need to be accepted and recognized for their special and unique spirits. One assumes the good intentions of coworkers and colleagues and does not reject them as people, even when one may be forced to refuse to accept certain behaviors or performance.

Healing

The healing of relationships is a powerful force for transformation and integration. One of the great strengths of servant leadership is the potential for healing one's self and one's relationship to others. Many people have broken spirits and have suffered from a variety of emotional hurts.

Awareness

General awareness, and especially self-awareness, strengthens the servant-leader. Awareness helps one in understanding issues involving ethics, power, and values. It lends itself to being able to view most situations from a more integrated, holistic position.

Persuasion

Another characteristic of servant leaders is reliance on persuasion, rather than on one's positional authority, in making decisions within an organization. The servant leader seeks to convince others, rather than coerce compliance.

Conceptualization

Servant leaders seek to nurture their abilities to dream great dreams. The ability to look at a problem or an organization from a conceptualizing perspective means that one must think beyond day-to-day realities. For many leaders, this is a characteristic that requires discipline and practice.

Foresight

Closely related to conceptualization, the ability to foresee the likely outcome of a situation is hard to define, but easier to identify. One knows foresight when one experiences it. Foresight is a characteristic that enables the servant leader to understand the lessons from the past, the realities of the present, and the likely consequence of a decision for the future. It is also deeply rooted within the intuitive mind.

Stewardship

Peter Block (1993)—author of Stewardship and The Empowered Manager—has defined stewardship as —holding something in trust for another‖ (p. xx). Robert Greenleaf's view of all institutions was one in which CEO's, staffs, and trustees all played significant roles in holding their institutions in trust for the greater good of society.

Discuss any five (5) elements of leadership problems in Nigeria.

(1) Incompetency and Mediocrity: Since independence, Nigeria's presidency has been occupied by men who are grossly incompetent and lack political will to put things straight and right. No one can give what he didn't have. They are theoreticians than practitioners

(2) Ethnicity and Tribalism: The three largest groups (Hausa-Fulani, Igbo, and Yoruba) have virtually nothing in common politically, socially, or historically. The overwhelming majority of Nigerians only speak their "home" language, and if they learn another, it is invariably English and not one of the other indigenous tongues.

(3) Mono-economy: Since Oil was discovered on Sunday 15 January 1956 at Oloibiri Oilfield by Shell Darcy, Nigeria has depended on it solely by neglecting her previous foreign exchange brands i.e Cocoa, wool, Coal, groundnut, fish etc. At the discovery of all, everyone jubilated that the era of want should soon be over. But the opposite was the case.

(4) Greed and Financial Corruption: Cases of corruption, misappropriation and greed has been well established in Africa's most populous nation-Nigeria. This has historical antecedents from the colonial masters, the defunct regional government, then military regime and the republics.

(5) Insincerity and hypocrisy: One of the major problems identified under poor leadership in Nigeria is the insincerity of mind and action of its leaders. Nigeria for the past 56 years has been unlucky, very unlucky to have crop of opportunists than leaders whose only interest is their pocket

Discuss any two (2) major theories of corporate governance and their assumptions.

Legitimacy Theory

Another theory reviewed in the corporate governance literature is legitimacy theory. Legitimacy theory is defined as —a generalized perception or assumption that the actions of an entity are desirable, proper, or appropriate with some socially constructed systems of norms, values, beliefs and definitions‖ (Suchman, 1995). Similar to social contract theory, legitimacy theory is based upon the notion that there is a social contract between the society and an organization. A firm receives permission to operate from the society and is ultimately accountable to the society for how it operates and what it does, because society provides corporations the authority to own and use natural resources and to hire employees

Political Theory

Political theory brings the approach of developing voting support from shareholders, rather by purchasing voting

power. Hence having a political influence in corporate governance may direct corporate governance within the organization. Public interest is much reserved as the government participates in corporate decision making, taking into consideration cultural challenges (Pound, 1983). The political model highlights the allocation of corporate power, profits and privileges are determined via the governments' favour. The political model of corporate governance can have an immense influence on governance developments. Over the last decades, the government of a country has been seen to have a strong political influence on firms. As a result, there is an entrance of politics into the governance structure or firms' mechanism

Discuss any four (4) Contingency theories of leadership and their assumptions.

The Trait Theory

The first systematic effort by researchers to understand leadership was the attempt to identify the personal characteristics of leaders. It has been argued that there is a predisposition to consider leaders as naturally braver, more aggressive, more decisive and more articulate than other people, so that they stand out in terms of physical characteristics, personality and intelligence. One popular myth is that natural leaders are tall and stand above the crowd like Charles De Gaulle or Abraham Lincoln. A complicating factor in this trait theory is the question of cultural bias. If there is a bias towards tall leaders, then most leaders will be tall because they are the ones who will be chosen.

The Functional or Group Approach

This approach neither focuses attention not on the personality of the leader nor on the man in the job per se but on the functions of leadership, is always present in any group engaged in a task. The functional approach views leadership in terms of how the leader's behaviour affects and is affected by the group of followers. As such, it concentrates on the nature of the group of followers or subordinates. It thus focuses on the content of leadership. The functional approach believes that the skills of leadership can be learnt, developed and perfected. Kotler (1990), successful companies seek out people with leadership potential. With careful selection, motivation and encouragement, a reasonable percentage of people can play important leadership roles in business organization.

Action –Centered Leadership

The general theory on the functional approach is associated with the work of John Adair (1984), and his ideas on action-centered leadership. According to him the effectiveness of the leader is dependent upon meeting tree areas of need within the work group- the need to achieve the common task, the need for team maintenance and the individual needs of group members. He symbolizes these needs by three overlapping circles.

The Behavioural Approach to leadership

When it becomes evident that effective leaders did not apparently have any distinguishing traits or qualities, researchers tried to understand how successful and unsuccessful managers behave differently. Instead to find out what effective leaders were, researchers finds out what effective leaders did. The importance of arriving at this conclusion is that it meant to correct actions and behaviour could be learned and training could be provided for leadership

Discuss any four (4) emerging leadership theories and their assumptions.

Leader-Member Exchange Theory

Most leadership theories assume that a leader behaves in much the same way towards all followers. In contrast, leader-member exchange theory holds that leadership is a one-on-one exchange in which leaders behave differently with different group members rather than the same with each member. It further holds that followers based on the quality of their interpersonal relationships (Exchanges) with a leader, form different group (higher quality and an out-group (lower quality).I

Charismatic Leadership Theory

This is an extension of attribution theory. It says that followers make attributions of heroic or extraordinary leadership abilities when they observe certain behaviors. Studies on charismatic leadership have been directed at identifying those behaviors that differentiate charismatic leaders. Several authors have attempted to identify personal characteristics of the charismatic leader.

Transactional Leadership Theory

Most of the leadership theories presented like the Ohio State studies, Fiedler's model, path-goal theory and the leader participation model have concerned transactional leader. These kinds of leaders guide or motivate their followers in the direction of established goals by clarifying role and task requirements. However, there is another type of leader who inspires followers to transcend their own self- interest for the good of the organization and who is capable of having a profound and extraordinary effect on his or her followers.

Transformational Leadership Theory

Transformational leadership is built on top of transactional leadership- it produces level of subordinate effort and performance that go beyond what would occur with a transactional approach alone. Moreover, transformational leadership is more than charisma. The purely charismatic leader may want followers to adopt the charismatic's world view and go on further, the ability to question not only established views but evenly those established by the leader.

Mention any five (5) rights and privileges of shareholders

1. The company, through the directors, should ensure that shareholders' statutory and general rights are protected every time;
2. It should be the responsibility of the shareholders to elect directors and approve the terms and conditions of their directorship positions;
3. The venue of the annual general meeting should be carefully chosen such that the shareholders could attend and vote and not be disenfranchised as a result of distance and cost;
4. Before the annual general meeting, notices should be dispatched at least 21 working days, with such details and annual reports, audited financial statements and other information that would enable the shareholders to vote properly on any issue.
5. A separate resolution should be proposed by the board at the general meeting on each substantive issue in such a way that they could be voted for in an organized manner;

Corporate governance is important because corporations contribute to economic growth and development. Discuss any three (3) importance of effective corporate governance.

Answer

Fairness: Ensuring the protection of shareholder rights, including the rights of minority and foreign shareholders, and ensuring the enforceability of contracts with resource providers

Transparency: Requiring timely disclosure of adequate, clear and comparable information concerning corporate financial performance, corporate governance and corporate ownership

Accountability: Clarifying governance roles and responsibilities, and supporting voluntary efforts to ensure the alignment of managerial and shareholder interests, as monitored by boards of director and·

Responsibility: Ensuring corporate compliance with the other laws and regulations that reflect the respective society's values.

Your workers should be looking forward to the customer and not backwards, over their shoulders, at you. It also means genuine praise for what goes well and leading by taking responsibility early and immediately if things go bad‖ – Jordan French, president, BNB Shield

—Leadership is the ability to unapologetically express and see out your business vision. Leadership is using your intuition to guide you, and inspiring your team to come along for the ride. Leadership is listening to that _inner voice', even when it is risky, scary, and challenging the status quo‖ – Makenzie Marzluff, founder, Delighted By

—Leadership is the ability to help people achieve things they don't think are possible. Leaders are coaches with a passion for developing people, not players; they get satisfaction from achieving objectives through others. Leaders inspire people through a shared vision and create an environment where people feel valued and fulfilled‖ – Randy Stocklin, co-founder and CEO

The trouble with Nigeria is simply and squarely a failure of leadership. This Nigeria leadership problem has the elements that better describe it. Discuss any five (5) of these elements.

(1) Incompetency and Mediocrity: Since independence, Nigeria's presidency has been occupied by men who are grossly incompetent and lack political will to put things straight and right. No one can give what he didn't have. They are theoreticians than practitioners. They intentionally appoints mediocre to work with them just to loot the treasury without query. Repeatedly, many of Nigeria's leaders picks mediocre as successors just to have a clean track record after committing crimes that are above the laws. But this is grossly not sustainable, the Nigeria's economic soul cries for rescue.

(2) Ethnicity and Tribalism: The three largest groups (Hausa-Fulani, Igbo, and Yoruba) have virtually nothing in common politically, socially, or historically. The overwhelming majority of Nigerians only speak their "home" language, and if they learn another, it is invariably English and not one of the other indigenous tongues. History of ethnic bigotry in Nigeria can be traced back to 1946, during the colonial era when Sir Arthur Richard, Nigeria then Governor General introduced a Regional Government. He divided Nigeria into NEW. An acronym that stands for Northern, Eastern and Western Nigeria. With each region headed by a Premier.

(3) Mono-economy: Since Oil was discovered on Sunday 15 January 1956 at Oloibiri Oilfield by Shell Darcy, Nigeria has depended on it solely by neglecting her previous foreign exchange brands i.e Cocoa, wool, Coal, groundnut, fish etc. At the discovery of all, everyone jubilated that the era of want should soon be over. But the opposite was the case. Some has argued that Oil killed the giant in Nigeria. Since its discovery, Nigeria has been plunged into a number of leadership related problem i.e greed, egocentrism, intolerance, fraud, misappropriation and diversion of national fund for personal use, oil theft and financial stealing etc.

(4) Greed and Financial Corruption: Cases of corruption, misappropriation and greed has been well established in Africa's most populous nation-Nigeria. This has historical antecedents from the colonial masters, the defunct regional government, then military regime and the republics.

Good governance is integral to the very existence of a company. Briefly describe any five (5) objectives of corporate governance.

1. A properly structured Board capable of taking independent and objective decisions is in place at the helm of affairs;
2. The Board is balanced as regards the representation of adequate number of non-executive and independent directors who will take care of the interests and well-being of all the stakeholders;
3. The Board adopts transparent procedures and practices and arrives at decisions on the strength of adequate information;
4. The Board has an effective machinery to sub serve the concerns of stakeholders;
5. The Board keeps the shareholders informed of relevant developments impacting the company;

Leaders as agent of change must exhibit exceptional qualities. Discuss any five (5) of these qualities.

 Honesty: The number one quality identified by this researchers is honesty. The respondents explain that a good leader must be honest to the oath of office that saw him to power and also to his numbers of followers. They added that a good leader must be morally upright, unpretentious, reasonable in situations and impartial.

 Forward Oriented: A good leader must be forward oriented. He must always see the goal to be achieved and the challenges ahead. He must have the —Can Do‖ behavior within him. This quality is very close in comparison with the Conceptual skill of leadership. This means seeing things before others and the ability to predict or forecast what tomorrow will bring.

 Competence: A good leader must be competent technically, human relation wisely. He must not be a specialist in a field but a generalist. He must be able to lead others to the very rightful part. He must have the ability to propel others to achieve results.

 Inspiring: A good leader must be able to inspire his followers to attain goal and Change as a process was conceptualized and divided into three phases. List the three and briefly describe any two (2) of them.

(1) unfreezing—it is about readiness to change means it involves getting a point of an understanding that change is necessary and to be prepare for leaving the current state of comfort for the sake of future benefits;
(2) moving—At this stage, people have to move forward to adopt a new changed setup. People are most fearful from this stage of change process as they have to leave their current comfort zone

Nikols (2016) defined change management in four (4) basic dimensions. Discuss them.
(a) The task of managing change: The first and most obvious definition of ―change management‖ is that the term refers to the task of managing change. The obvious is not necessarily unambiguous.
(b) An area of professional practice: Today, change management has become an area for scholars to study. In almost all cases, the process of change is treated separately from the specifics of the situation. It is expertise in this task of managing the general process of change that is laid claim to by professional change agents.
(c) A body of Knowledge: Stemming from the view of change management as an area of professional practice there arises yet a third definition of change management: the content or subject matter of change management. This consists chiefly of the models, methods and techniques, tools, skills and other forms of knowledge that go into making up any practice.
(d) A control Mechanism: consisting of requirements, standards, processes and procedures. This last functional definition of change management helps to explain the dynamics of what a true change management procedure should be.

Transformational leaders achieve performance beyond expectations through four leadership factors. List and briefly describe any two (2) of them.
(1) Charisma: Transformational leaders use charisma to provide followers with a clear vision of a desired future state, instill pride, and gain respect and trust.
(2) Inspiration: They use inspiration to excite their followers with the idea that they can achieve great things with extra effort.

Discuss any two (2) features of each of the following types of leadership:
i. Charismatic Leadership
ii. Transactional Leadership
iii. Servant Leadership
iv. Transformational Leadership features of Charismatic Leadership
(1) Self confidence: They have complete confidence in their judgment and ability.
(2) A vision: This is an idealized goal that proposes a future better than the status quo. The greater the display between this idealized goal and the status quo, the more likely that followers will attribute extraordinary vision to the leader.
Features of Transactional Leadership
(1) Contingency Reward: Contacts exchange of rewards for effort, promise rewards for good performance, recognizes accomplishments.
(2) Management by Exception: Watches and searches for deviations from rules and standards, takes corrective action
features of Servant Leadership
1. Service to Others: Servant-leadership begins when a leader assumes the position of servant in their interactions with followers. Authentic, legitimate leadership arises not from the exercise of power or self-interested actions, but from a fundamental desire to first help others.
2. Holistic Approach to Work: Servant-leadership holds that ―The work exists for the person as much as the person exists for the work‖
